Three R's Have a Different Meaning Here

Nevada's Mustangs Are in Danger, Helicopter Haylift Has Started

MINDEN, Nev. (AP) — A helicopter haylift has gone into action in an effort to save a herd of Nevada's dwindling wild horses, marooned without food on a wind-swept ridge east of Lake Tahoe.

"We fed everything we could see, about 35 mustangs," said pilot Byron Clark after the first flight Wednesday.

"We were on a tight schedule and kept moving. But we'll go back Thursday and see if they ate."

A sheriff's posse and sportsmen's club got together with helicopter service owner Ed Counts to provide the haylift by helicopter at a cost of $170 per flying hour.

Counts estimated there were 40 to 50 wild mustangs scattered along a 28-mile ridge on the 9,000-foot Pine Nut mountains.

"They're up to their necks in snow. They haven't got any feed and they're down to skin and bones," he said.

Clark said he set down right among the wild horses. The stronger ones ran away from the noise, but some, weak from hunger, stayed only about 80 feet away.

"One group of three with a colt were too tired to go anywhere," he said.

Winds have swept the ridge almost bare. A series of storms scoured the horses to high ground, piling up shoulder-deep snow which eventually trapped them on the rocky ridge with only a few tufts of grass to eat.

The posse, sportsmen and local ranchers will try to break a trail for the mustangs to walk down, but the haylift was organized when it appeared they might starve first.

State law protects the wild horses, once hunted by air and ground vehicles for dog food.

If you ask most people to name the Three R's, they will say, "Readin', 'Ritin', and 'Rithin'." Not so at the School of Hope. There the Three R's are Routine, Repetition, and Relaxation.

Because the School of Hope is for mentally retarded children, teaching a Routine program of action through careful Repetition and a gentle emphasis on Relaxation is the most profitable method of instruction. This school has only been in operation a few weeks, and, temporarily, classes are being held at the Boy Scout Hut in Fair Park from 8:30 to 11:45 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Mrs. John Lloyd is the teacher paid by the O.E.O. through Operation Mainstream, and she has several helpers: Mrs. W.C. Bruner, Jr., Junior Auxiliary, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday; Mrs. Norman Gilby, Monday; Mrs. Elmer Smith, Tuesday; Mrs. Lacy Walters, Monday through Thursday, when needed; Mrs. Phillip Manus, Thursday; Mrs. Ted Price, Thursday, Friday.

These instructors use two methods of dealing with their charges — affection and discipline — in careful balance. They know they can't give too much of either, but, as it is true with all children and adults, both affection and discipline are vital for the best results.

Children are admitted through an Admissions and Dismissal Board and pay a small tuition fee. However, this is not necessary if the family cannot afford it. At present, the enrollment is 5 students, Jake Haddix, John Pine, Jeanette Walters, Carolyn Wingfield, and Robin Manus, and there is already a waiting list.

This Trainable Class of the Hempstead County Association for Retarded Children begins the school day with a Good Morning Song, Prayer, Pledge of Allegiance, and Finger Exercise. Then, each child goes into a separate routine designed for his or her particular needs. Exercise equipment for helping weak muscles, a low mirror for guiding those with speech defects, low chairs and tables for the comfort of little people are all part of time many items donated by the generous people in Hope for the School of Hope. A pot of flowers, the American flag, and carpeted areas to cut down on the sound are other features that add to the school's usefulness.

In mid-morning the children stop for snack time. Then, they sit at a table, fold their hands and bow their heads for a blessing, and are served crackers and milk. They are careful to save a few crumbs in paper napkins, and in pretty weather these are taken outdoors to feed the birds. A morning story is always received happily by the children, and it is followed by more individual routines.

Transportation for those who cannot get there by themselves is furnished by the O.E.O.'s Neighborhood Service Center. Physical Therapy is guided by Miss Beverly Schaefer of the Temple Home in Texarkana, and several of the children go to her each week.

What are the results, thus far, from this small class? Is it worth while? One look at a smiling face that heretofore has never showed happiness, or seeing one who had seemed helpless learn to brush his own teeth, or watch a girl recognize her own towel and wash rag by their color, and you know why there is hope for training these children who are not educable. This is, indeed, a School of Hope.

Shaw Found Innocent by Jury

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A jury's unanimous verdict of innocent today cleared Clay L. Shaw, 55, of a charge of conspiring to assassinate President John F. Kennedy.

Read to a packed, heavily guarded Criminal District Court at 1:02 a.m., the verdict triggered a moment of bedlam. There was an ear-splitting concerted shriek from the women spectators.

The 12-man jury rejected both the state case and Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's plea that a conviction would strike a blow at "excessive government power."

"Garrison has a right to his opinion about the government and the Warren Commission," said juror David I. Powe shortly after court adjourned. "But I just don't feel his opinion is enough to convict a man."

Shaw, a 6-foot-4 retired New Orleans businessman with tanned and craggy features, stood in a protective circle of deputies as the verdict was read.

"Do you wish the jury polled?" asked Judge Edward A. Haggerty.

Asst. Dist. Atty. James L. Alcock, who headed Garrison's team of prosecutors, slumped low in his chair. He shook his head wearily, side to side.

Powe, a juror who grew a goatee while sequestered during the 34-day trial, said the verdict was unanimous and was reached on the first ballot taken in the bleak little room behind the courtroom.

Deliberation took about 50 minutes. Shaw was cleared two years to the day from the date he was arrested—March 1, 1967.

The state charged Shaw with conspiring with Lee Harvey Oswald and others to murder Kennedy, who was slain in Dallas Nov. 22, 1963. The Warren Commission named Oswald as the assassin.

Much of the prosecution case concentrated on attacking the commission's conclusion that Oswald, a former New Orleans resident, was alone and unaided in the assassination.

Garrison, up for re-election in six months, was not in the courtroom when the verdict was read. He appeared rarely during the trial, leaving the case to four assistants.

In final arguments, he left the oratory on legal detail and testimony to the assistants—but made an emotional appeal in the final minutes, attacking the Warren Commission.

"The government handling of the investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy was a fraud," he said, "probably the greatest fraud perpetrated in the history of mankind."

The Warren Commission, he said, was a group of "men of high position and prestige sitting on a board and telling you what happened but withholding the evidence..."

"You can cause justice to happen in this case for the first time in five years," he concluded, "and if you do that, nothing you have ever done will have been more important."

Bill Would Set Up the Medicaid Plan

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas House Public Welfare Committee voted today to have a bill drafted for submission to the legislature to put Arkansas in the federal medicare program.

Rep. Bill Beaumont of Little Rock suggested that the measure be a committee bill.

The committee also voted to attempt to hold a joint session of the House and Senate to hear experts from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare answer questions concerning medicare.

The proposed bill will provide for the minimum plan under which a state may enter medicare.

Welfare Department officials estimate that it would require about $7.3 million in the fiscal year beginning July 1 and about $9.8 million in the second year of the biennium.

Still Hasn't Read Letter

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Linda Pearce, Joplin city clerk, received a letter from her brother, Gary, a government employee in Korea.

The letter came in a small box. On the outside was a notification:

"Jig saw puzzle inside. Letter written on back (of puzzle). Have fun. Love, Gary."

She still hasn't read the letter.

Mixed Drinks Bill Signed by Governor

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Senate passed the mixed-drink bill, 19 to 6, Friday afternoon and Governor Rockefeller flew in from the National Governors' Conference at Washington to sign it two hours and 20 minutes later.

Opponents of the bill, admitting defeat at the outset, tried four times to amend the bill (HB 113) and then freed it for a vote after a 30-minute debate.

Unlike the House of Representatives, which finally disposed of the bill Wednesday, the Senate approved the bill on the first vote and also attached the crucial emergency clause on the first try.

The emergency clause received the minimum of 24 votes needed, with eight senators voting against it. Without the emergency clause, the bill would not have become law until 90 days after the session, making it likely that petitions would have been raised to refer to law to the voters at the 1970 general election.

The House of Representatives had passed the bill on its second try Tuesday, 52 to 46, and a second attempt at attaching the emergency clause succeeded Wednesday 74 to 16.

L. Carter Johnson Dies at 75

L. Carter Johnson, well-known Hope freight traffic consultant of 708 E. Second St., died of a heart attack at 9 p.m. Friday in Hempstead Memorial Hospital. He was 75. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Mr. Johnson was a native of Hempstead county. He lived in Texas for a time as a young man but spent practically his entire adult life in Hope. He entered business as a bookkeeper and accountant for the former Plunkett & McRae wholesale grocery company here, became adept in handling freight routes and rates and eventually set up as an independent consultant to Southwest Arkansas shippers.

He was widely known among railwaymen and attended many Interstate Commerce Commission rate hearings ranging from St. Louis and Chicago to Kansas City, Houston, and New Orleans.

Mr. Johnson was a member of First Presbyterian church, a veteran of World War I and a member of the American Legion, and was a former Hope city councilman and ex-Rotarian, and an ardent fisherman.

He had no close kin, living alone since the death several years ago of his wife, Mrs. Rose Johnson.

Hearts Not Available, Many Die

However, others participating with him in symposiums at the American Academy of Forensic Sciences argued that consent of next of kin should be required.

East Germans Block Road Into Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — East German soldiers armed with sub-machine guns blocked the main autobahn between West Germany and West Berlin for two hours today, then reopened it.

The closure followed a Soviet announcement backing "necessary measures to cut short the unlawful militaristic activities" in West Berlin and an accusation from Moscow that Western air links to the isolated city were being used illegally.

It apparently signaled the start of maneuvers by Soviet and East German Warsaw Pact forces. The maneuvers in East Germany have been scheduled to start around the same time as West Germany's March 5 presidential election in West Berlin. They are generally regarded as another Communist harassment tactic to hinder access to West Berlin for the election, which the Soviets and East Germans have denounced as a "provocation."

Before the autobahn was closed travelers arriving in West Berlin reported six-hour delays on the 110-mile trip from the West German border. They said they saw troops, trucks and other military equipment moving on the autobahn.

It also was reported that Marshal Ivan I. Yakubovskiy, supreme commander of Warsaw Pact forces, flew to East Berlin Friday to confer with East German President Walter Ulbricht.

West German border officials said the East Germans threw red and white portable iron fences across the autobahn access and exit at Marienborn, opposite the West German border checkpoint at Helstedt, at 7 a.m. They were removed at 9 a.m. and Helstedt officials said western traffic began to move again.

The East Germans already have barred West German presidential electors and members of the West German armed forces from surface travel through East Germany to West Berlin. Western officials had suspected the maneuvers would further hamper road access.

Different Last Time He Saw Paris

By JOHN VINOCUR
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — The last time Richard Nixon saw Paris he had to humor a drunk, repeat his name several times for an unimpressed secretary and watch out for other "mashed potato" dancers on the floor of a discotheque.

It won't happen this time. Nor will Nixon, as he did when he was here June 19, 1967, hold up a piece of lobster for a photographer at a restaurant on the Left Bank, pass unnoticed at an "in" night club or grab a quick cocktail at the Ritz Bar.

It's all changed now, but Michael Pochna, the American who helped serve as Nixon's guide the last time he came to Paris, recalls how quiet things were then.

The commercial director of Raymond Lowey's industrial design firm here, Pochna is the son of John Pochna, an international lawyer, oil man and friend of Nixon. Pochna senior had the President as a guest once in St. Tropez and twice in Paris during Nixon's years out of public office.

Pochna said, "the last time he came through, the secretary in my office couldn't get the name right. She had to ask for it a couple of times—Dixon or Nixon? Anyway, she was terribly embarrassed when she found out."

The Pochnas and Nixon, after drinks at the Ritz Bar, went to La Mediterranee, a well-known fish restaurant.

After dinner the group went on to New Jimmy's, a club in Montparnasse run by a woman called Regine. If you mean anything to anyone in France, Regine comes up and says hello. She said nothing to Nixon.

Dancing at New Jimmy's is strictly "jerk" and "mashed potatoes." Nixon took a turn on the floor with Pochna's wife, Marie-France.

Reservists Are Janitors for Army

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army has ordered commanders to stop using reservists as janitors.

The practice started after some commanders dropped civilian contracts for custodial services at Army Reserve Centers because of a money squeeze.

"It was emphasized that use of technicians and unit members for custodial duty is detrimental to unit readiness," the Army said when asked about this situation.

"Action is being taken to remedy the situation."

Like almost every other military service, the Army Reserve has had to cut spending wherever possible in line with congressional directives to cut all governmental spending by $6 billion.

The Army called its reserve funding "tight but adequate," and claimed "no special efforts are required beyond the normal careful control of expenditures."

However, the assignment of some reservists to housekeeping chores appeared to be an out-of-the-ordinary measure. There were reports that Army reservists this year would move to summer training in trucks instead of buses, and over toll-free roads, to avoid expense.

The Army rather obliquely confirmed the truck aspect, saying "trucks are used to move some units to and from summer camp."

This practice, it was explained, "provides convoy training, transportation for use while at camp, and results in some fund savings through a reduction in commercial bus requirements."

Local Option Bill Planned for Monday

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Rep. David R. Kane of Little Rock says he plans to introduce the Little Rock Jaycees' local option liquor bill Monday.

The bill would provide options, including the sale of beer for off - premise consumption only, the sale of beer for on-premise consumption only and the sale of mixed drinks. It would also alter existing laws on local option liquor elections.

Kane said he intended to introduce the bill Thursday but changed his mind before the first reading because he didn't want to "muddy the water" on the administration's local option, mixed-drink bill. Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller measure has passed the House and is pending in the Senate.

J. R. Heard, 83, Dies at His Home

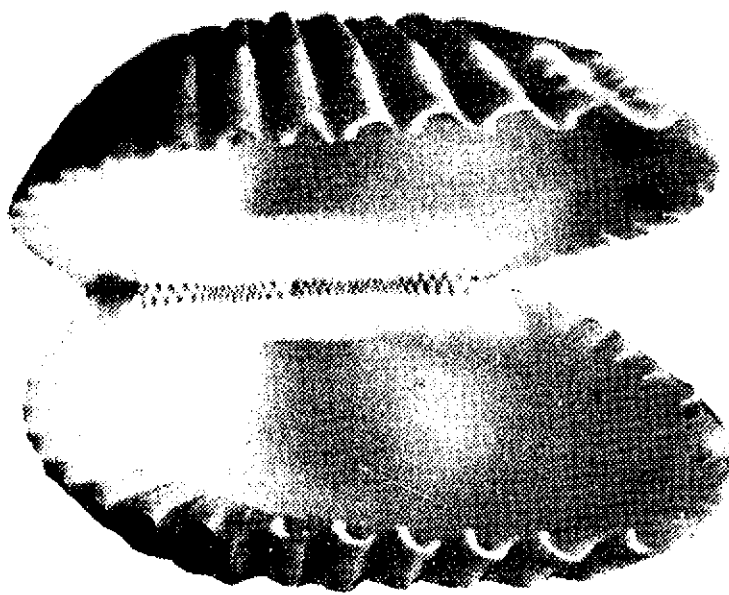

Joseph R. Heard, 83, a resident of Hope for 47 years, died early today at his home here. He was a member of a prominent Winfield, La. family and a retired businessman. He was born on plantation Shiloh in 1886, the son of Lorraine Shearer and John R. Heard. He was a nephew of former Louisiana Governor William Wright Heard.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Daisy Huffman Heard, also a member of a pioneer Louisiana family, two daughters, Mrs. James G. Williams Jr. of Boswell, Okla. and Montego Bay, Jamaica and Mrs. L.W. Bower of Shreveport.

Arrangements are incomplete but burial will be in the Huffman plot in Winfield by Herndon Funeral Home.

SHELLS

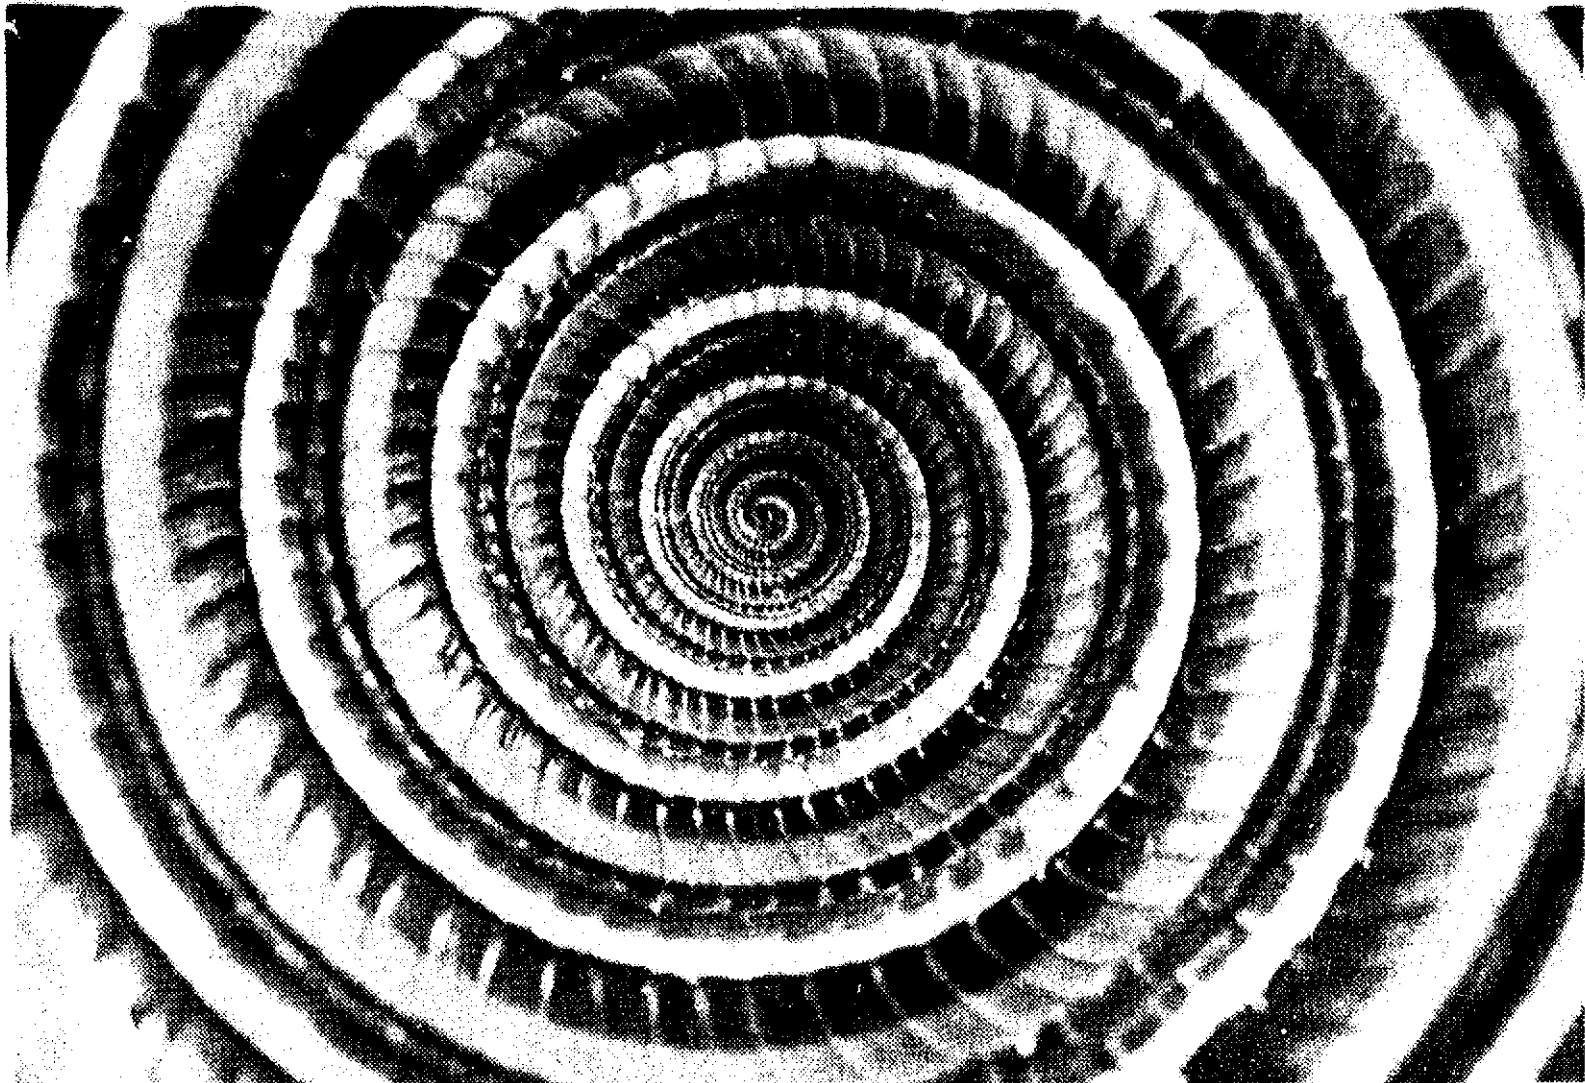

Sea Poetry

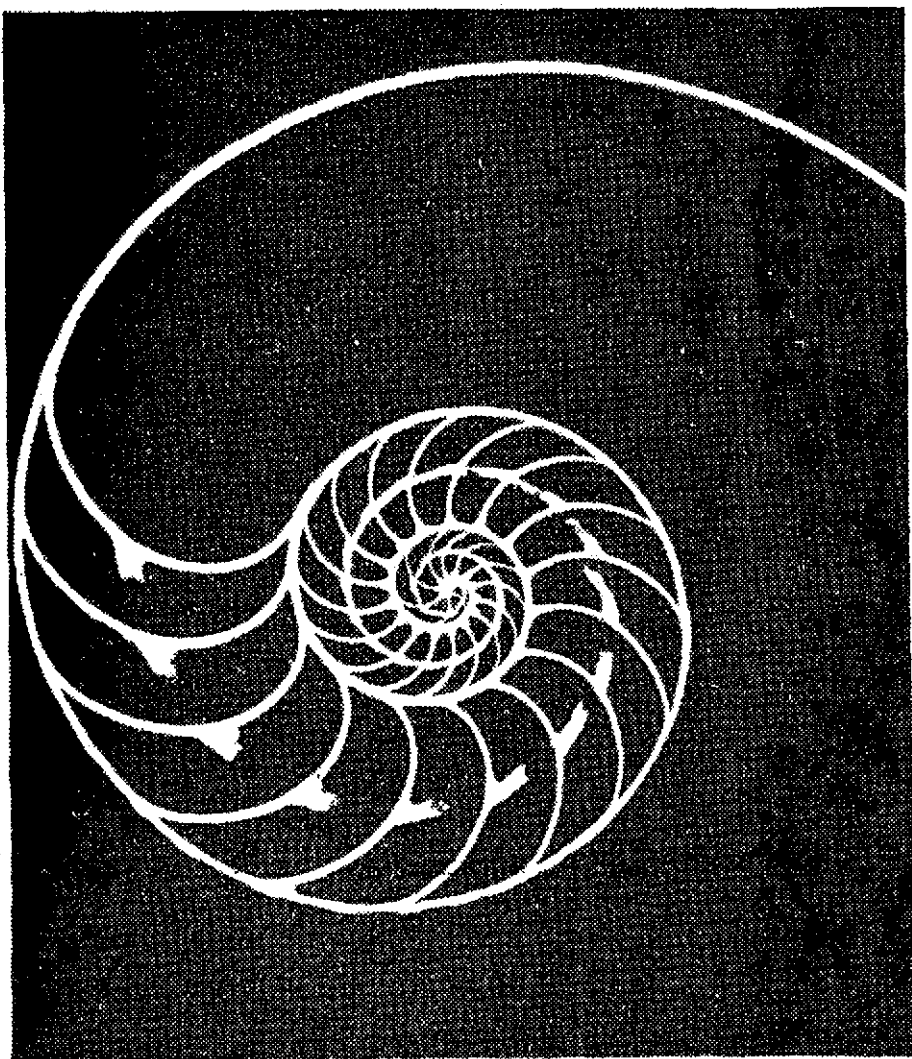

Anadara philippiana Dunbar — Ark Shell (with typical toothed hinge).

Shells have always been a source of wonder, curiosity and pleasure. Their infinite variety is reflected in their fascination for man in innumerable aspects of his life. They have been used as currency, and have inspired artists and poets. They recur as religious symbols, and have been woven into myth and legend. They pose unanswered questions to the scientist even now. Serious collectors can be haunted by a literally priceless rarity of incredible beauty. And, on any beach, a child can squat in the wet sand and poke five hundred million years of miraculous creation with an inquiring finger. Or hold it to his ear to catch the song of the oceans.

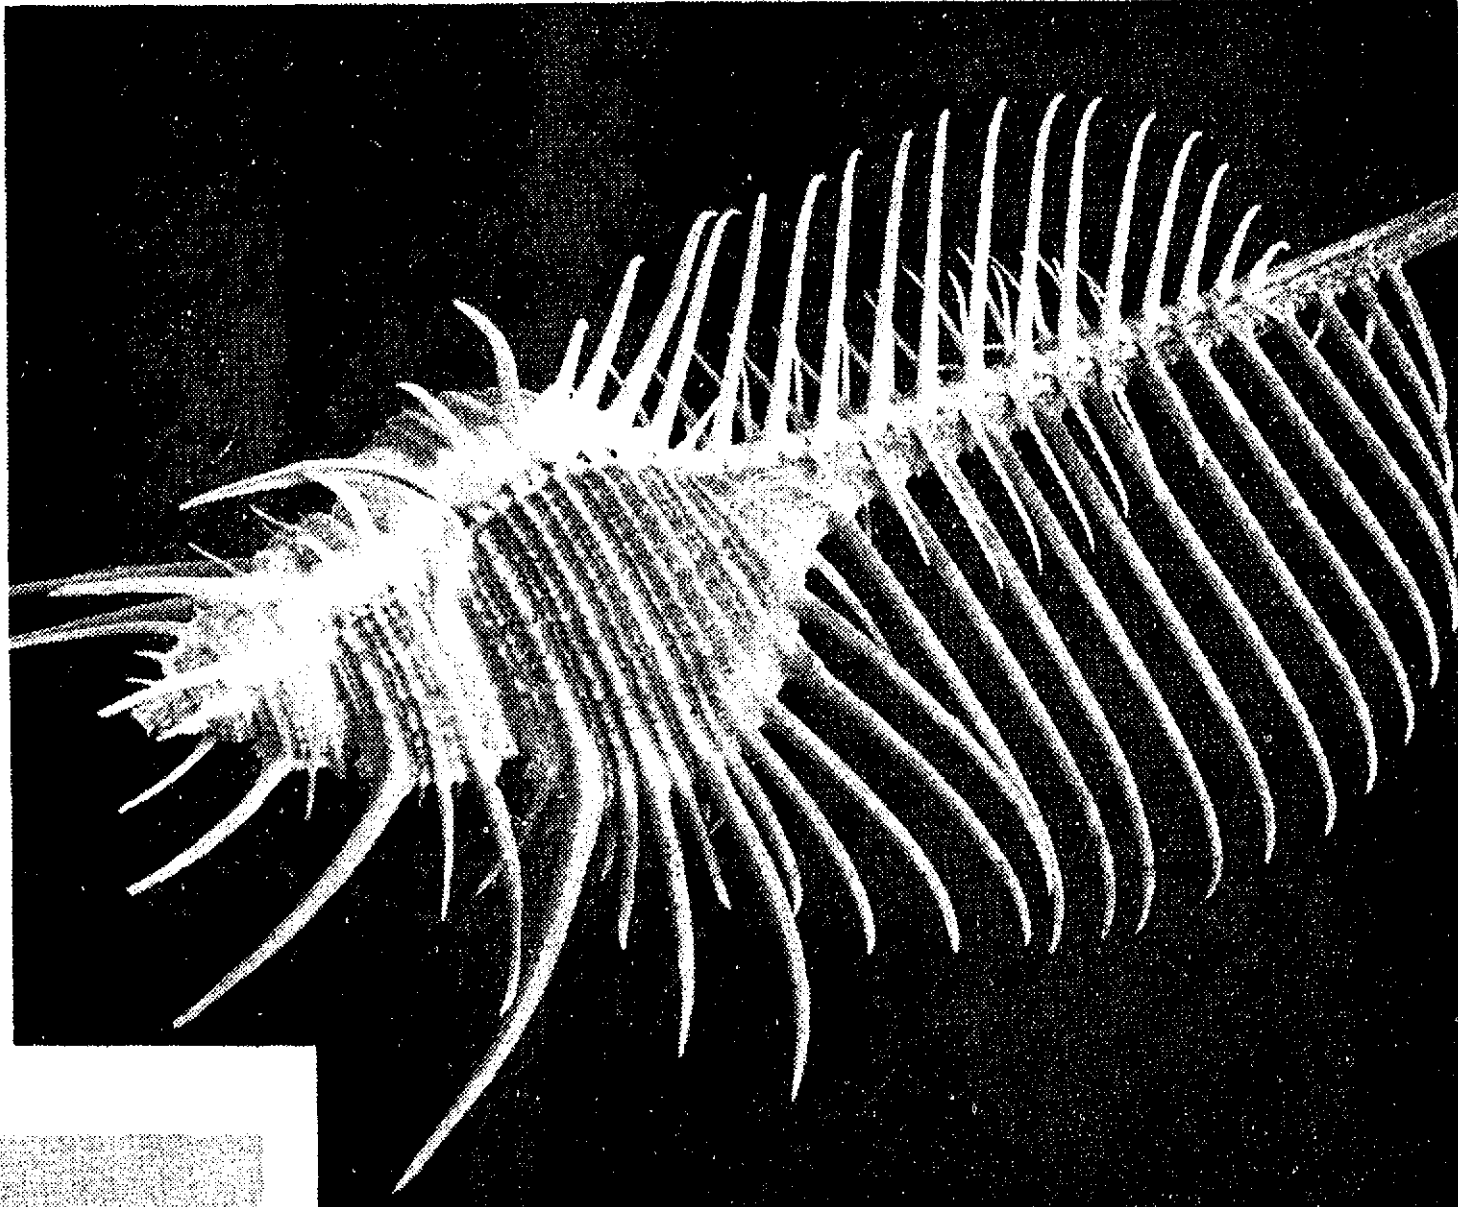

These photographs, by H. Landshoff, are from "The Shell: Five Hundred Million Years of Inspired Design," by Hugh and Marguerite Stix and R. Tucker Abbott. Mr. and Mrs. Stix are founders and directors of the Stix Rare Shell Gallery of New York, and they have traveled to all corners of the globe in quest of shells and shell lore.

SHOWBEAT

By DICK KLEINER
Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Red Buttons made a date to spend the night with Jane Fonda.

Another juicy morsel of Hollywood gossip? No—this one is an example of how some actors take their jobs seriously.

Red and Jane are two of the stars of "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" which ABC Pictures is soon to begin filming. This is from a book—written in 1931—which has become a near-classic in Europe but never made much noise here. It's a story of the marathon dancers of the early '30s.

Red and Jane play two marathon dancers. And they wanted to get a taste of the weariness those wacky waltzers felt. It was Red's idea to go all night long, and Jane eagerly joined him.

"We're just going to see

age. Be sure to put your own name and address on the letter as well as on your envelope. Write chatty, interesting, upbeat notes, and tell something about yourselves. You may not ALWAYS receive a reply—the men are mighty busy over there—but at least you'll know you cheered someone who needs all the encouragement he can get!" — H.

HOPE (ARK) STAR, Printed by Offset
how it feels," Red said. "We won't have any music. We'll just go on the set and dance—an hour and 50 minutes on, then a 10-minute break. That's the way the marathon dancers worked. I thought it would be a good idea and I called Jane. She's pretty hip, and she said she'd love to."

Buttons says this is, without a doubt, "my best shot since 'Sayonara.' He plays a sailor, down on his luck, who tries the marathon for lack of anything better. He has dyed his hair silvery-orange to look older.

I went with him to wardrobe, where he tried on his outfit. He had a sailor suit with a beat-up brown jacket to go over it. He thought the jacket should look older.

"We can age the jacket some more," the wardrobe man said.

Red put everything on—making sure, first, that he had comfortable socks and shoes because he would be on his feet for days, and surveyed himself in the mirror.

"O.K.," he said, "if you get me some velour socks and put a few more years on the jacket."

Then he looked at himself and laughed.

"What a strange contrast," he said. "See this watch? It's an astronaut's watch. I'm one of only two or three people who have watches like this who aren't astronauts. And it looks funny to see it when I'm wearing this old World War I sailor suit."

Director Sydney Pollock showed me around the one set they have for the picture. The last time I saw Pollock was in Yugoslavia, where he was doing "Castle Keep." That one got in so much trouble from weather and fires and other disasters that he vowed his next picture would be in Hollywood.

"Isn't this a change from Yugoslavia?" he said. "I've come full circle—from all that over there down to one set here."

They had built a replica of the Aragon Ballroom as it was in 1932. The sleazy bleachers, the mock-gaudy chandeliers, the pitted floor—it all looked beautifully real.

"Want to see something really great?" Pollock asked, and led me off the main floor, to show me the dressing rooms and rest rooms. Everything was perfect—even the sinks were chipped.

Practical for Purse
If you are tired of powder that spills on your dressing table or liquid make-up bottles that shatter on the bathroom floor when dropped, buy your cosmetics in aerosol form or plastic tubes. A gentle push releases just the amount you need on your fingertips. These are also practical for carrying in your purse or on trips.

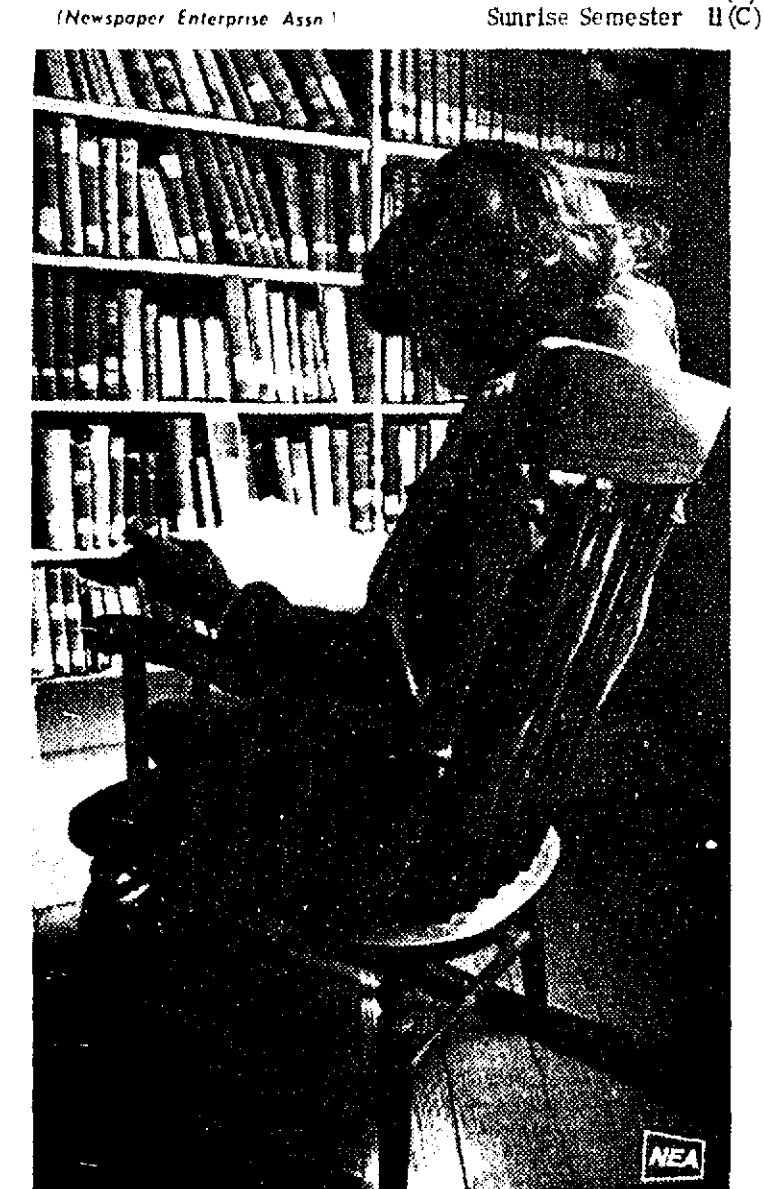

and the coats looked like the blankets hadn't been changed in six months.

Pollock had to go to the studio hospital for his physical. Before a picture begins, all the cast and crew must undergo medical exams. Gig Young, who plays the marathon dance MC, was already there. They both passed.

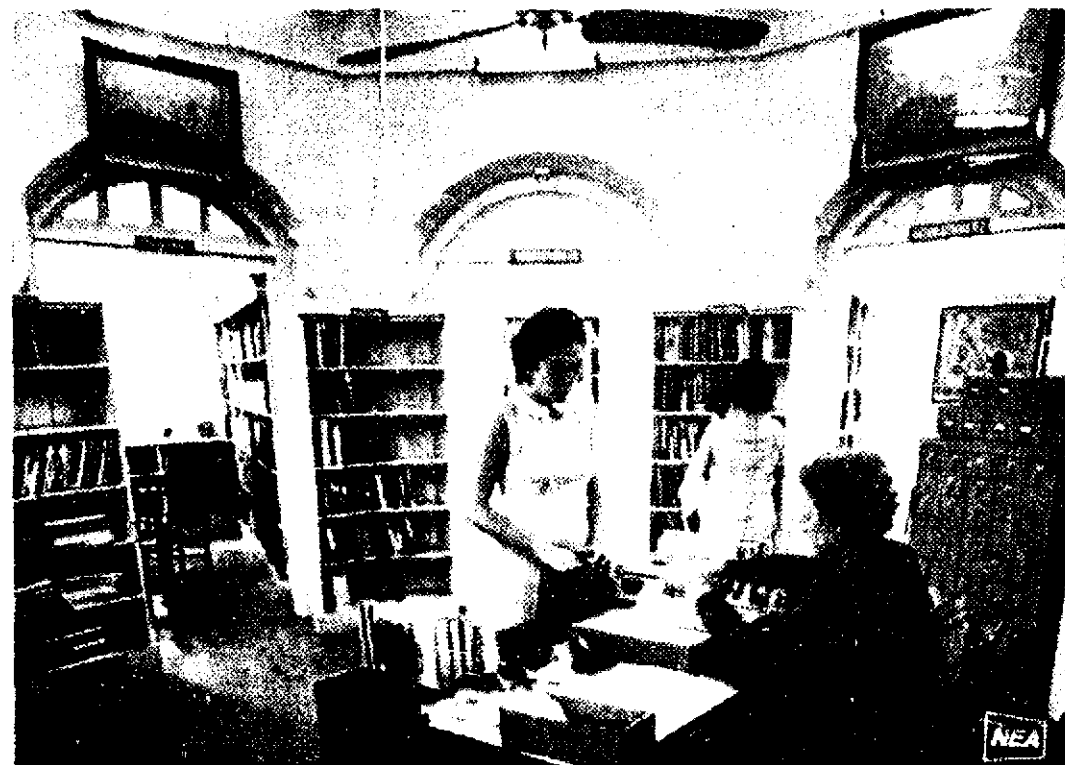

That's how it goes, just before they begin filming. The set is ready, the cast is ready, the crew is ready. All they need now is the starting signal.

Strategically placed rocking chairs induce visitors to laze away an afternoon. Soothing Bahama breezes drifting through open windows add to the peace and quiet of reading rooms which were once cells.

Nassau's Library Was 18th-Century Prison

"It's rather confining in here, isn't it?" a recent visitor observed while browsing in Nassau's tiny public library.

"Not much ventilation, either, if you didn't keep that door open all the time. It's almost like being in jail."

"It IS a jail, madam," a library assistant explained.

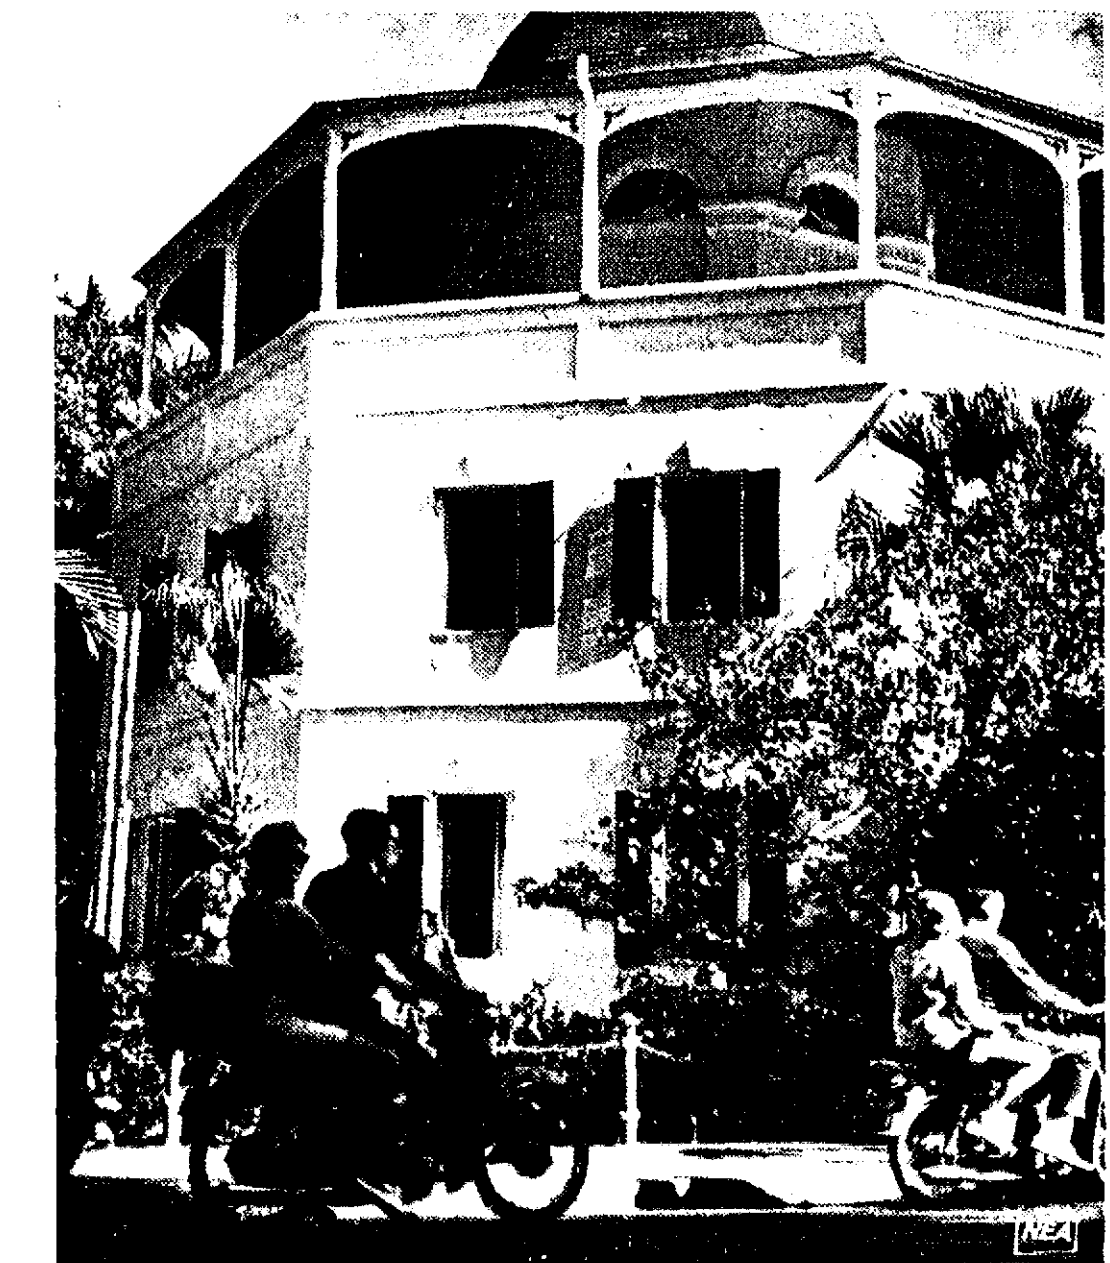

Like many another structure in old Colonial Nassau, the little library in

Shirley Street has a storied past. Built in 1797, it has served as a prison, workhouse and house of correction. Today, it is one of the many discoveries picked up by the hundreds of thousands of visitors to Nassau in the Bahamas.

The octagonal shape of the building was determined by the island's governor, Lord Dunmore, who arrived in Nassau in October, 1787. In 1873, when a new prison was built, the old jail was converted into a library, which today contains some 20,000 volumes, many of them collectors' items. The bookcase alcoves were once individual prison cells. A gardener's shed beneath the building was a dungeon.

With an expected 900,000 visitors streaming into the Bahamas this year, the library offers a window into the past. A copy of the original charter granted to the first settlers of the Bahamas and other memorabilia, such as 17th-century maps, ancient pistols and old paintings, are in the archives.

Tourists on motor bikes ride past the 172-year-old library which once held pirates captive. Beneath the building, in what was a dungeon, crude pictures of sailing vessels have been chiseled on the walls by former prisoners. Today, Miss Gwen Griffin, librarian, checks books, right, in a central room on the main floor. Reading rooms in background were prisoner cells until 1873.

SHELLS

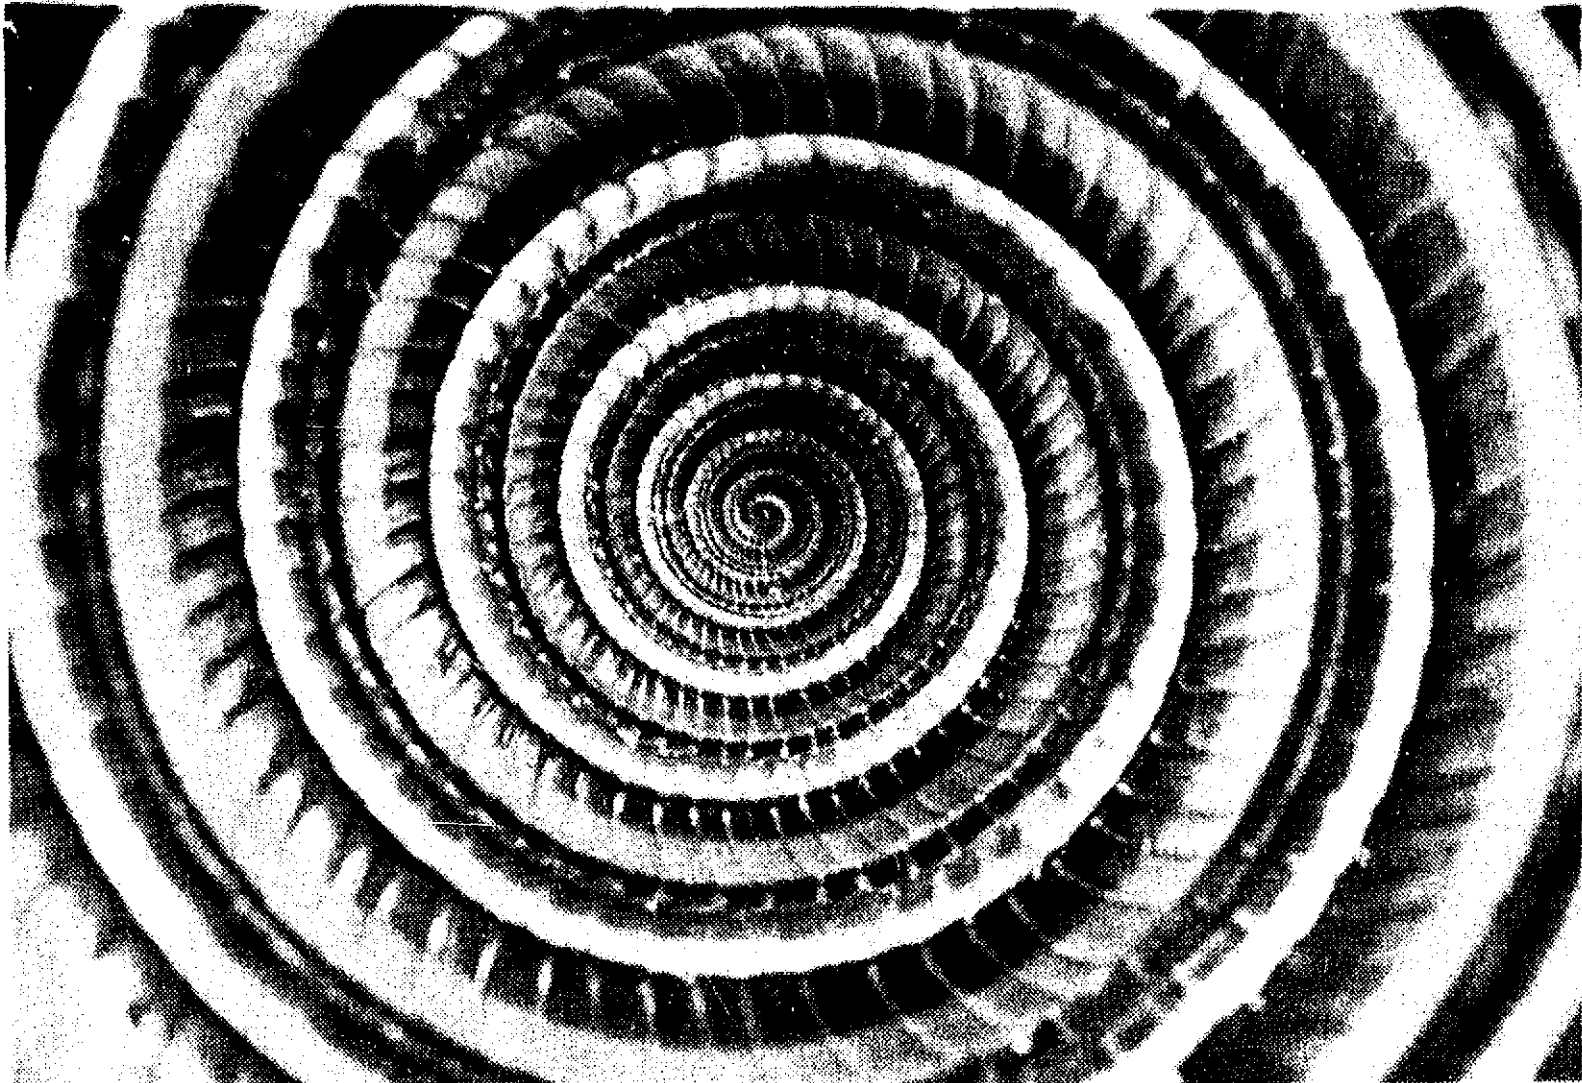

Sea Poetry

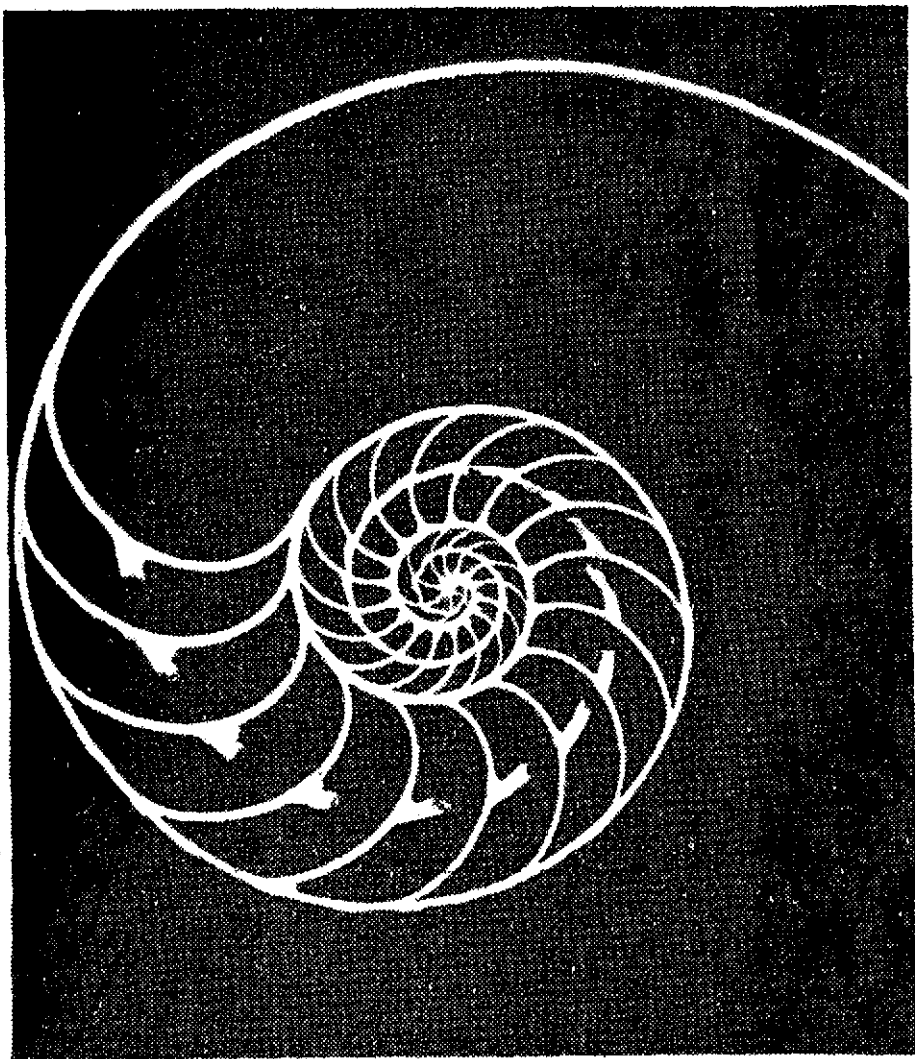

Anadara philippiana Dunbar—Ark Shell (with typical toothed hinge).

Shells have always been a source of wonder, curiosity and pleasure. Their infinite variety is reflected in their fascination for man in innumerable aspects of his life. They have been used as currency, and have inspired artists and poets. They recur as religious symbols, and have been woven into myth and legend. They pose unanswered questions to the scientist even now. Serious collectors can be haunted by a literally priceless rarity of incredible beauty. And, on any beach, a child can squat in the wet sand and poke five hundred million years of miraculous creation with an inquiring finger. Or hold it to his ear to catch the song of the oceans.

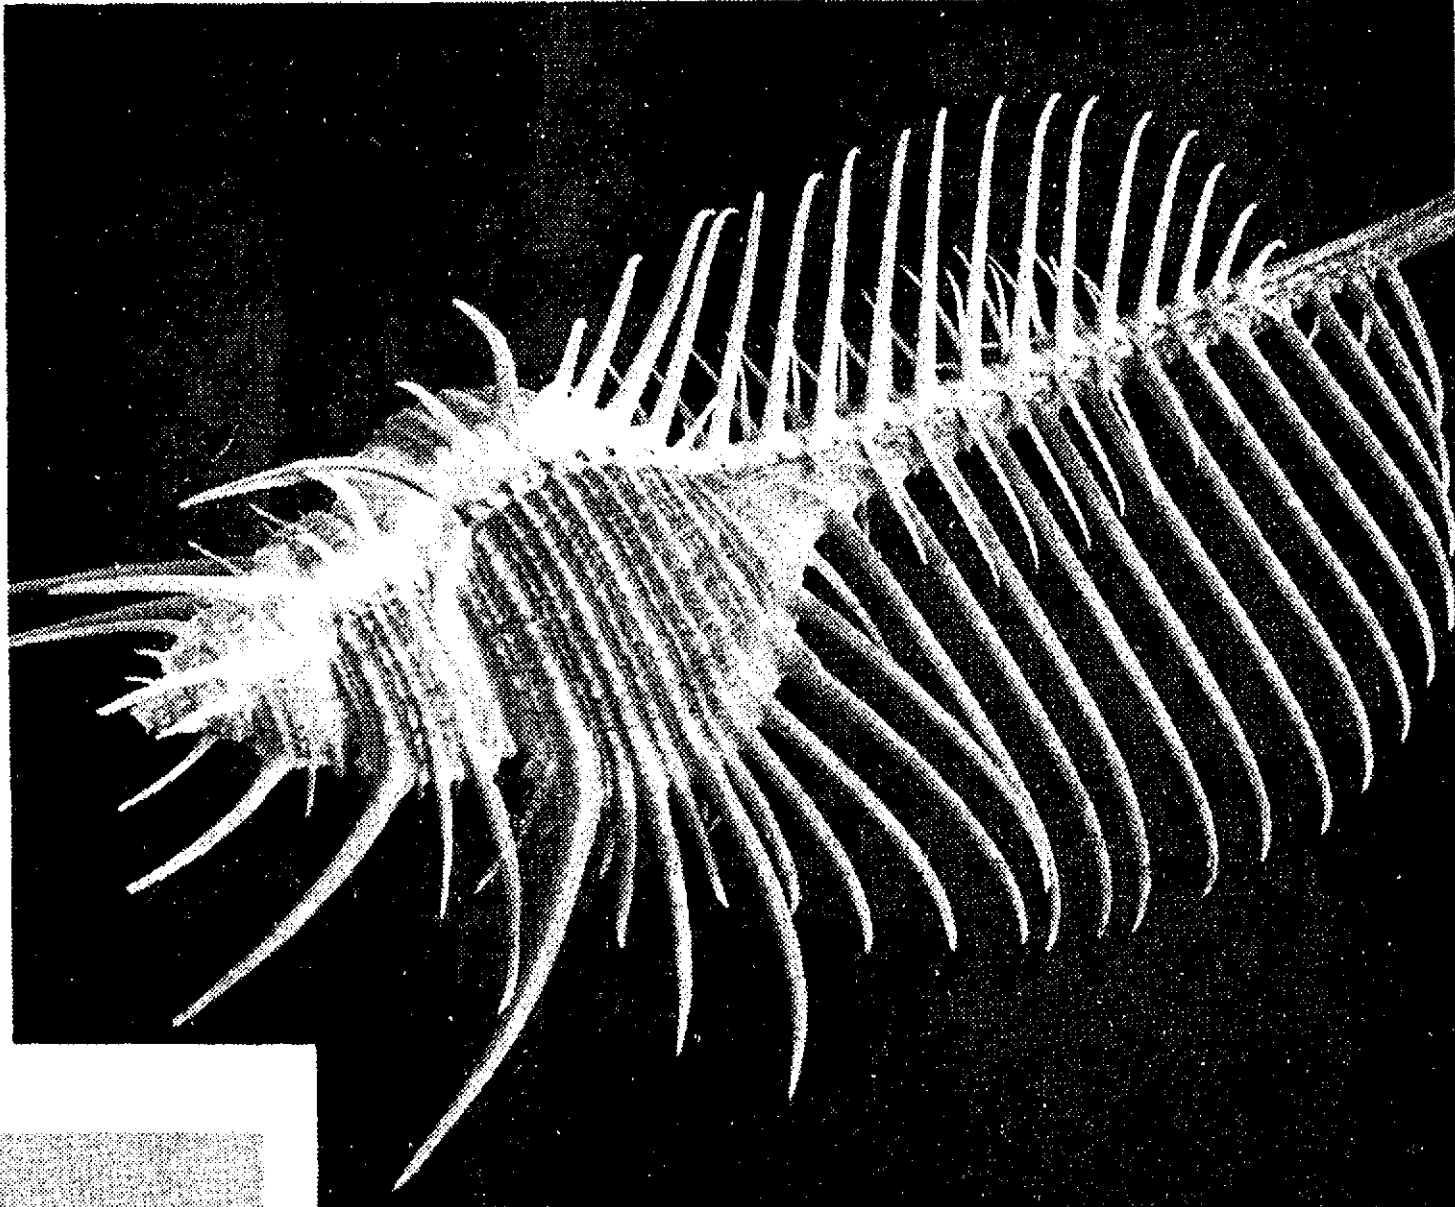

These photographs, by H. Landshoff, are from "The Shell: Five Hundred Million Years of Inspired Design," by Hugh and Marguerite Stix and R. Tucker Abbott. Mr. and Mrs. Stix are founders and directors of the Stix Rare Shell Gallery of New York, and they have traveled to all corners of the globe in quest of shells and shell lore.

Architectonica perspectiva Linne—Perspective Sundial. Greatly enlarged detail here shows the clearly delineated design and delicately sculptured surface.

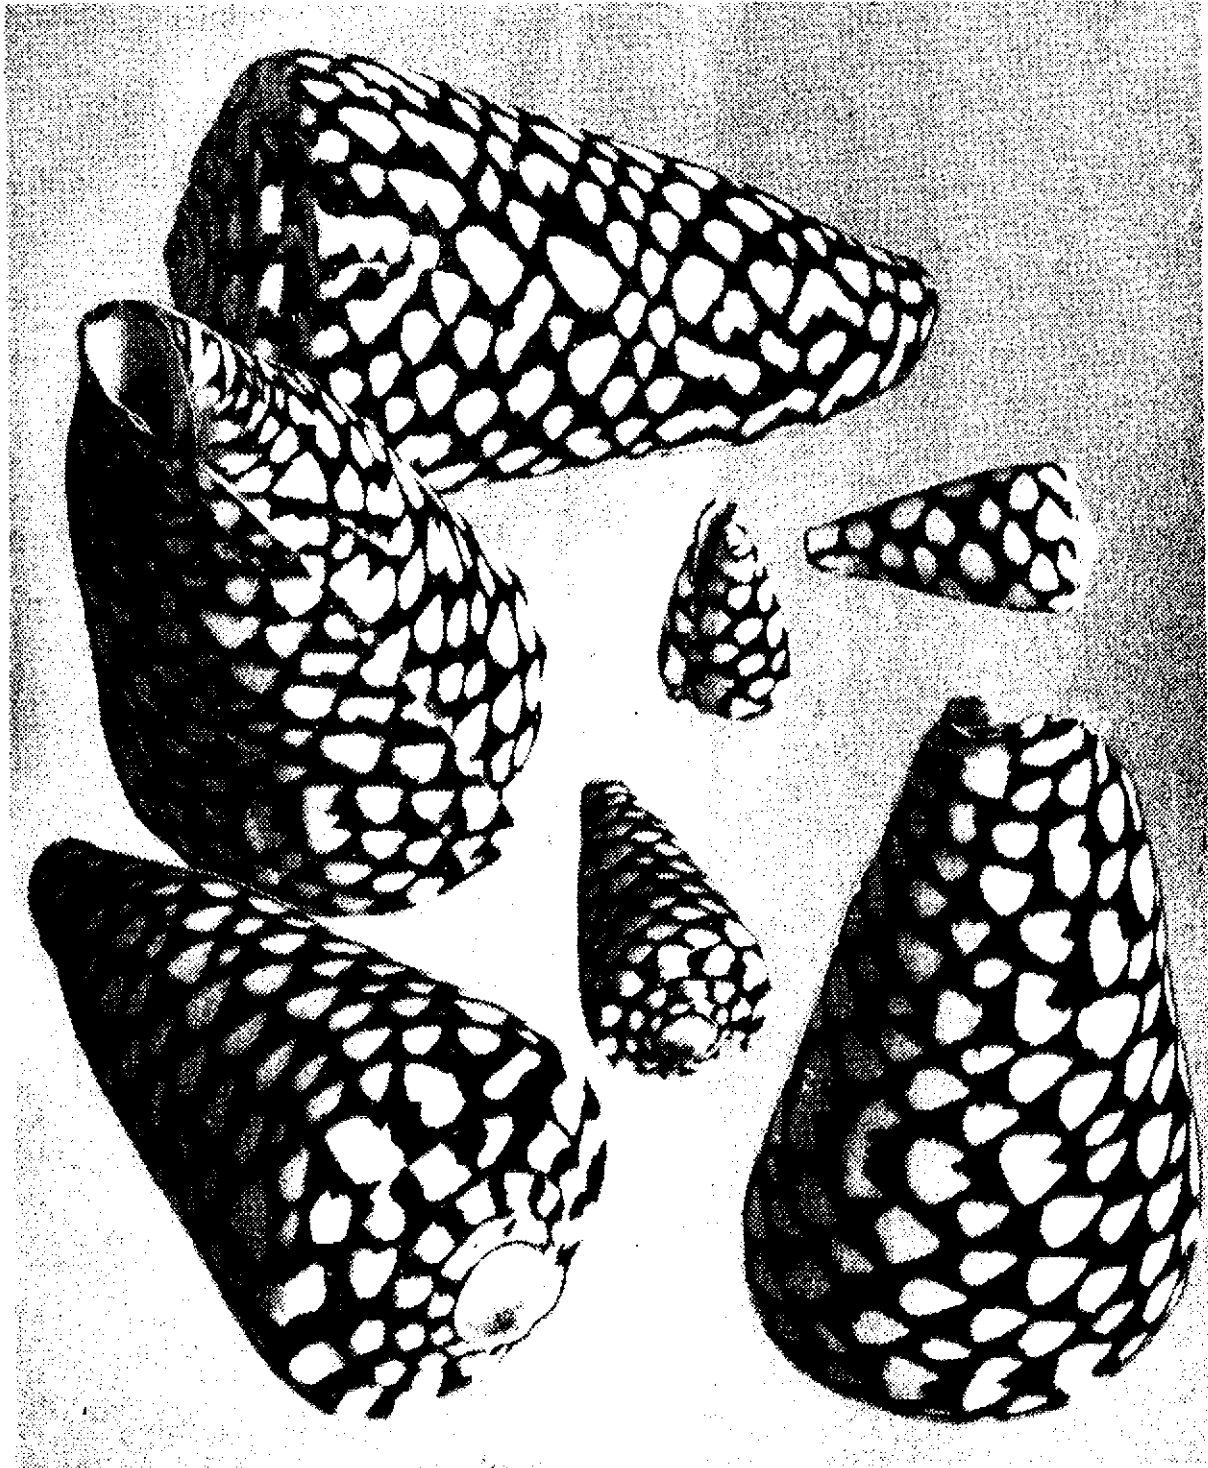

Nautilus pompilius Linne—Chambered Nautilus (center slice).

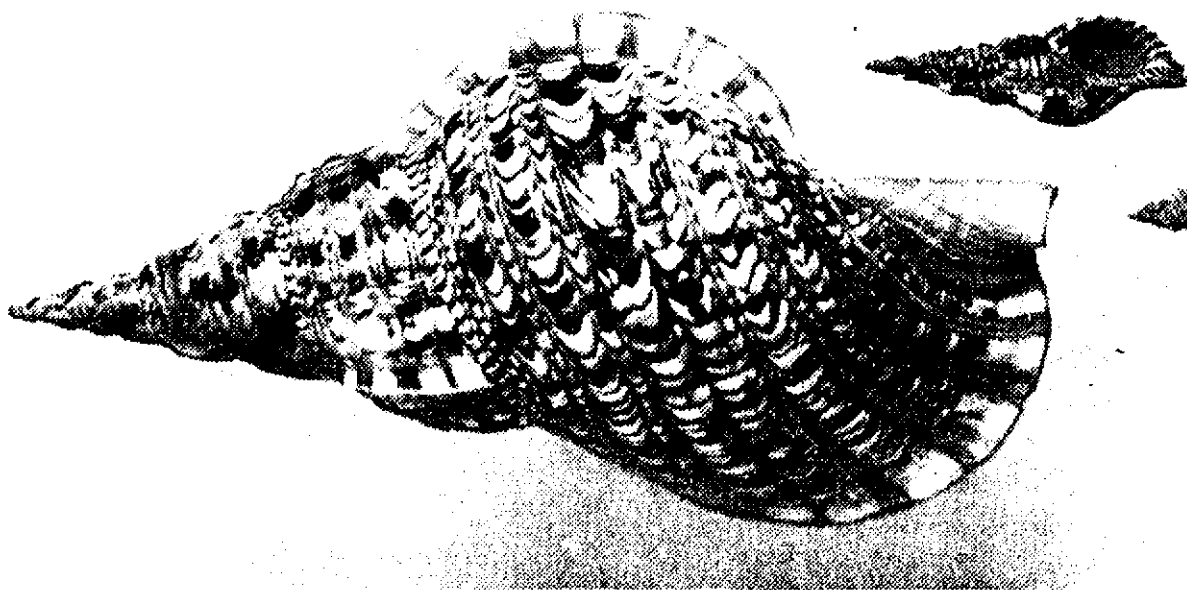

Murex pecten Lightfoot—Comb of Venus.

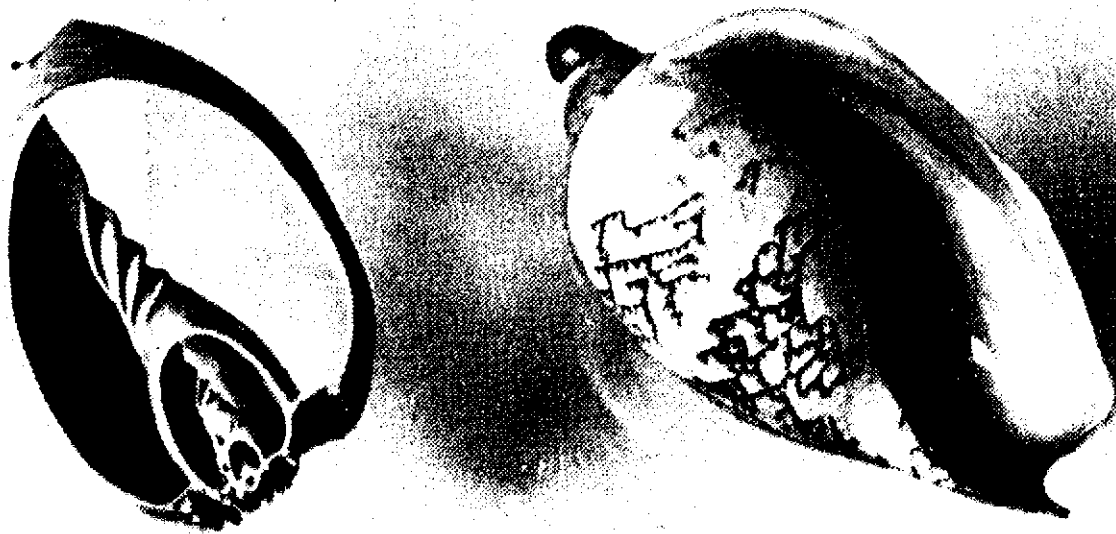

Pleuroploca gigantea Kiener—Florida Horse Conch.

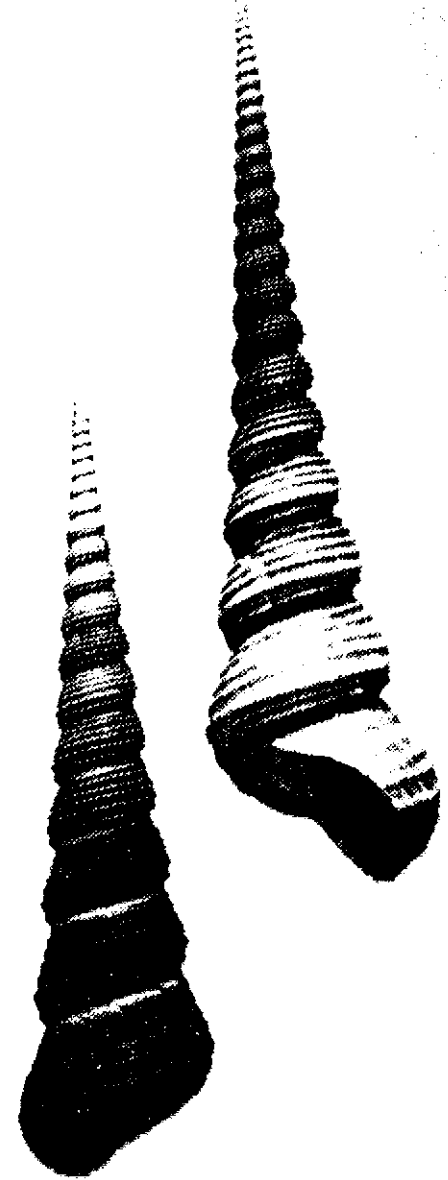

Conus marmoreus Linne—Marble Cone.

Charonia tritonis Linne—Pacific Triton.

Turritella terebra Linne—Auger Turritella. An Indo-Pacific species, found in shallow, tropical waters.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

ONE LITTLE FAULT

Dear Helen: I am dating a wonderful fellow. He is kind and generous, and immaculate dresser with very nice manners. But there's one exception: When we dine either in public or at home, he very methodically lays his napkin across his right knee and then after he handles food, he proceeds to lick each of his ten fingers with great gusto.

People turn around and stare. At our house there used to be a sign on the dining table. It said, "Only Goops Lick Their Fingers. Don't be a Goop."

Should I tell him tactfully? This is almost ruining our relationship — GOOP HATER

Dear Goop Hater: When a habit threatens a relationship, it better be discussed. Tell your fellow about the sign on your dining table, and how much it impressed you. I think he'll get the message. — H.

Dear Helen: One of my brothers worked for various service stations and said each was the same.

He says the women's restrooms have peep holes in the walls, where men can watch from a small room on the opposite side. My brother warned me, "Sis, don't ever change clothes in a public rest room, and use them only when absolutely necessary!" He said every time the fellows see a gal headed for the little room, they head for the room behind it. I'm seriously considering taking a sheet with me when I travel, so I can make myself a tent in service station restrooms.

Isn't this absolutely disgusting? — CONCERNED

Dear Concerned: Isn't this a little far-fetched? Service station managers don't hire peeping Toms. I think your brother is trying to shock his gullible little sister. — H.

Dear Helen: I would like to express my sincere appreciation to you and your wonderful readers who have helped make Vietnam Mail Call a successful program. Our 1968 Christmas card project was the most successful of the four years the program has been conducted.

Letters have poured in from Vietnam, ships at sea, Thailand, telling us how much those cards and letters meant to Servicemen. The feeling was, they said, that this proved they had support from people at home.

Again, thanks to the thousands upon thousands who have helped make life a little easier for our gallant fighting men. — E. PAUL STEWART, Project Coordinator, Vietnam Mail Call, Box 3104-A, Columbus, Georgia.

Dear Readers: Keep those letters to Servicemen coming! Send them to Vietnam Mail Call, address above, and enclose five cents to help with overseas post-

Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Red Buttons made a date to spend the night with Jane Fonda.

Another juicy morsel of Hollywood gossip? No—this one is an example of how some actors take their jobs seriously.

Red and Jane are two of the stars of "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" which ABC Pictures is soon to begin filming. This is from a book—written in 1931—which has become a near-classic in Europe but never made much noise here. It's a story of the marathon dancers of the early '30s.

Red and Jane play two marathon dancers. And they wanted to get a taste of the weariness those wacky waltzers felt. It was Red's idea to go all night long, and Jane eagerly joined him.

"We're just going to see

age. Be sure to put your own name and address on the letter as well as on your envelope. Write chatty, interesting, upbeat notes, and tell something about yourselves. You may not ALWAYS receive a reply—the men are mighty busy over there—but at least you'll know you cheered someone who needs all the encouragement he can get! — H.

HOPE (ARK) STAR, Printed by Offset

how it feels," Red said. "We won't have any music. We'll just go on the set and dance—an hour and 50 minutes on, then a 10-minute break. That's the way the marathon dancers worked. I thought it would be a good idea and I called Jane. She's pretty hip, and she said she'd love to."

Buttons says this is, without a doubt, "my best shot since 'Sayonara.' He plays a sailor, down on his luck, who tries the marathon for lack of anything better. He has dyed his hair silvery-orange to look older.

I went with him to wardrobe, where he tried on his outfit. He had a sailor suit with a beat-up brown jacket to go over it. He thought the jacket should look older.

"We can age the jacket some more," the wardrobe man said.

Red put everything on—making sure, first, that he had comfortable socks and shoes because he would be on his feet for days, and surveyed himself in the mirror.

"O.K.," he said. "If you get me some velour socks and put a few more years on the jacket."

Then he looked at himself and laughed.

"What a strange contrast," he said. "See this watch? It's an astronaut's watch. I'm one of only two or three people who have watches like this who aren't astronauts. And it looks funny to see it when I'm wearing this old World War I sailor suit."

Director Sydney Pollock showed me around the one set they have for the picture. The last time I saw Pollock was in Yugoslavia, where he was doing "Castle Keep." That one got in so much trouble from weather and fires and other disasters that he vowed his next picture would be in Hollywood.

"Isn't this a change from Yugoslavia?" he said. "I've come full circle—from all that over there down to one set here."

They had built a replica of the Aragon Ballroom as it was in 1932. The sleazy bleachers, the mock-gaudy chandeliers, the pitted floor—it all looked beautifully real.

"Want to see something really great?" Pollock asked, and led me off the main floor, to show me the dressing rooms and rest rooms. Everything was perfect—the sinks were chipped,

Nassau's Library Was 18th-Century Prison

"It's rather confining in here, isn't it?" a recent visitor observed while browsing in Nassau's tiny public library.

"Not much ventilation, either, if you didn't keep that door open all the time. It's almost like being in jail."

"It IS a jail, madam," a library assistant explained.

Like many another structure in old Colonial Nassau, the little library in

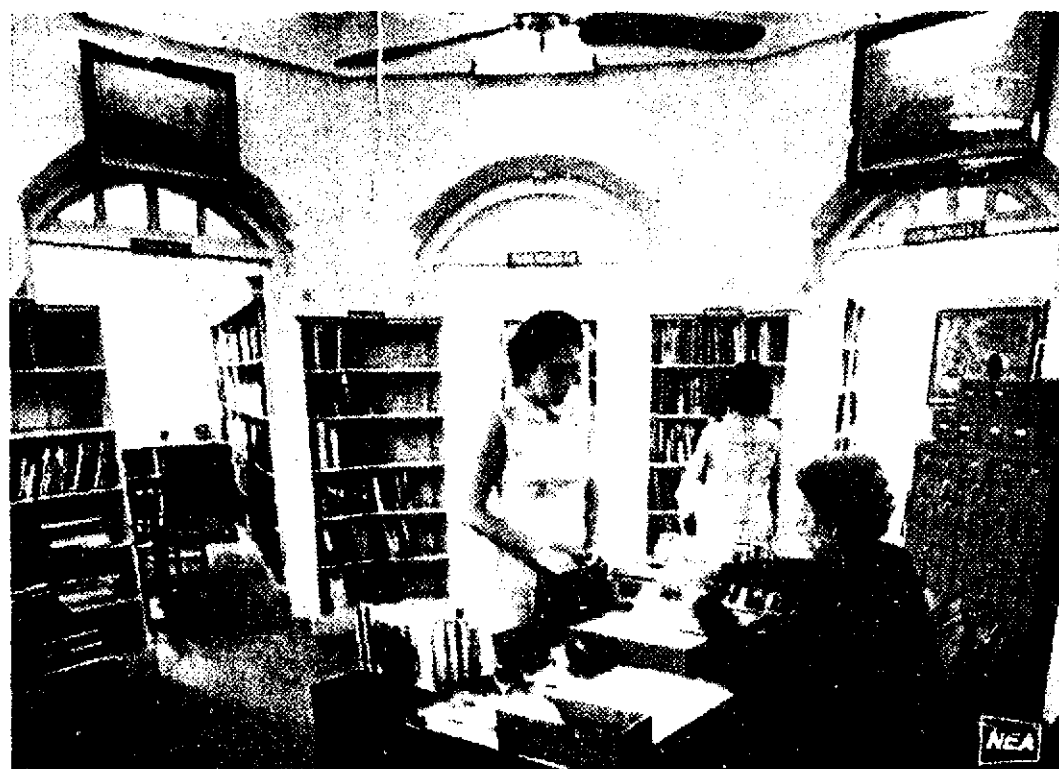

Shirley Street has a storied past. Built in 1797, it has served as a prison, workhouse and house of correction. Today, it is one of the many discoveries picked up by the hundreds of thousands of visitors to Nassau in the Bahamas.

The octagonal shape of the building was determined by the island's governor, Lord Dunmore, who arrived in Nassau in October, 1787. In 1873, when a new prison was built, the old jail was converted into a library, which today contains some 20,000 volumes, many of them collectors' items. The bookcase alcoves were once individual prison cells. A gardener's shed beneath the building was a dungeon.

With an expected 900,000 visitors streaming into the Bahamas this year, the library offers a window into the past. A copy of the original charter granted to the first settlers of the Bahamas and other memorabilia, such as 17th-century maps, ancient pistols and old paintings, are in the archives.

Strategically placed rocking chairs induce visitors to laze away an afternoon. Soothing Bahama breezes drifting through open windows add to the peace and quiet of reading rooms which were once cells.

Tourists on motor bikes ride past the 172-year-old library which once held pirates captive. Beneath the building, in what was a dungeon, crude pictures of sailing vessels have been chiseled on the walls by former prisoners. Today, Miss Gwen Griffin, librarian, checks books, right, in a central room on the main floor. Reading rooms in background were prisoner cells until 1873.

PARIS-(NEA)-There is a solemnity about the few dozen spectators who stand outside the Hotel Majestic. They are clustered in groups of three and four and are mostly glum as international dignitaries arrive to open another meeting of the Vietnam peace talks.

Then the crowd begins to stir. A black limousine swings up to the hotel entrance and a small, almost miniature woman steps carefully out.

Madame Binh, the crowd whispers. Madame Binh. The woman hesitates and nods. Her olive skin crumples into a delicious smile. She waves her right arm passionately and she giggles. "Merci, merci beaucoup."

The crowd beams and breaks into applause. Clearly, Madame Nguyen Thi Binh has done it again. She has charmed the people. As deputy chief of the National Liberation Front (Viet Cong) delegation, she has used femininity to gain sympathy for her side.

She does it well. All Paris has been softened by her amalgamation of sadness and serenity. Political friends and foes admit she is a beautiful, gracious lady.

South Vietnamese observers have grumbled about her. They say she's purely propaganda. Even her name means "Sister Peace," they explain, and she has been used to focus attention, not to say sentiment, on the otherwise undistinguished NLF delegation.

Yet even the Saigonese admire her style. Style is not the only asset of Sister Peace. She also has political savvy secured from devoted service to revolutionary causes. Though she was mostly unknown before the Paris talks began, she has long been high in the rebel hierarchy.

In a later private talk, she says her political beginning dates back two dozen years (she's 41 now). That's when she began dueling invaders

FIRST OF ITS KIND, reportedly, to be seen behind the Iron Curtain is this snowmobile, brought to Russia by Joseph Haban, a U.S. sportsman from Racine, Wis. Haban plans to use the vehicle in hunting Siberian bear. He is seen here testing the machine in front of the impressive Moscow University.

Since then Sister Peace has climbed high on the Ho Chi Minh ladder. Currently, she is the vice-president of the Women's Union for the Liberation of South Vietnam.

She says she has never fired weapons nor gone on any formal combat missions. But she has lived the harsh life of the guerrilla. Although she won't say, her home is probably near the border of central Tay Ninh Province, and she has had her share of ducking bombs and bullets in that neighborhood.

"It is a hard life," she admits, "but a patriot must expect hard things in hard times."

Moreover, she continues, a patriot must be prepared to sacrifice her family. She has a husband and two children (still in the war) whom she seldom sees.

She says she misses her family. She remembers sewing for them, cooking for them, playing classical music by record for them. She recites their names, their ages, their hobbies, their faults, their ambitions.

And when she does, her eyes flick over. She pauses. Her faces goes still. And she looks lonely.

She admits she has a woman's fear of war. The noise rattles her, the sights make her ill. Her son, she says, wants to be a fighter pilot one day and it panics her that, in fact, he very well might be.

It's not that Sister Peace avoids war, she says. Obviously not. But she says she wishes it would not happen. "The Americans," she sighs. "Damn them. They are responsible. They bomb the innocent and the animals."

The crowd outside the Majestic Hotel has taken shelter against the chilly rain. The day's conference has started. It will be several hours before it ends.

Some people will wait the whole time. Into twilight. They stamp their feet and blow on their hands. They huddle together and watch the hotel doors. They want to be there, they say, when Sister Peace comes out.

Man Tries to Burn Himself

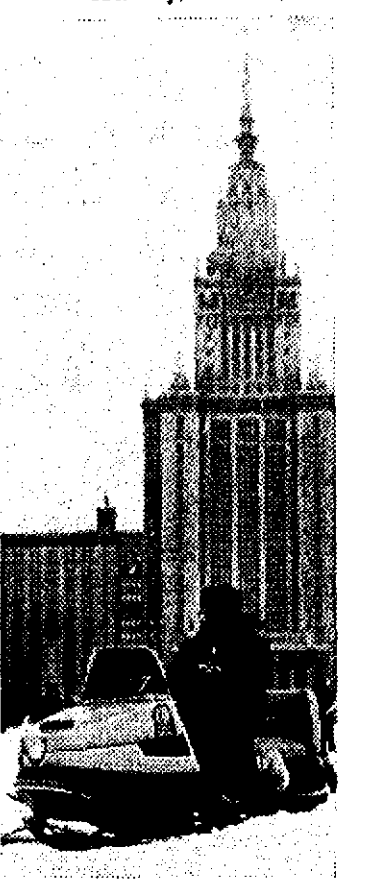

BONN (AP) - Police said a 57-year-old businessman disgruntled by what he regarded as unjust taxation soaked his topcoat with gasoline and set it alight Tuesday at the finance ministry.

A porter put out the flames before the irate taxpayer could suffer serious injury.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - Flight controller Jack Sellers turned his binoculars on the Birmingham airport parking lot during an air traffic lull and saw a car being stripped.

Sellers testified in court Tuesday two men removed a wheel, tire assembly and tape player while he was calling police.

Patrolman G.R. Hill said he caught Erwin W. Blanks, 17, and Cecil D. Watts, 20, in the act. They were held pending grand jury action.

God's Word

Come let us go into the House of the Lord

Says Come

In all the world no monument is more famous than Bartholdi's Statue of Liberty. Standing on an isle in New York harbor, it is the symbol of a nation that enjoys the ultimate in political and religious freedom. It is our Americanism landmark.

Since 1886, the towering statue has been the first welcoming beacon for countless thousands coming to these shores to find a better life. . . . The life of Liberty, of Freedom, the American way. The inscription on its base carries a potent message of promise as significant as the monument itself:

"Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore,
Send these, the homeless, the tempest-tost, to me:
I lift my lamp beside the golden door."
Then, if we have in the past, may we never again take Liberty for granted — it wears a price tag.

These businessmen listed below urge everyone to get behind the churches. They alone provide a solution to the problems facing us.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Modern Dentistry Holds Many Surprises

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.

 DEAR DR. LAWRENCE:
 I haven't gone to the dentist
 for at least 10 years and now I'm afraid to go because he might tell me that all my teeth have to come out. But he's got me now. I broke a tooth and the jagged edge is cutting my tongue. What shall I do?—Israel G.

 ANSWER: Reminds me of the man with a broken tooth who came to the dentist complaining that the jagged edge was cutting his tongue. When he sat in the chair, the dentist asked if he wanted the tooth extracted. "Oh, no," he replied. "I only want you to bandage my tongue."
 Forgive the levity, Israel
 G., and go to the dentist.
 Don't be afraid. You have a pleasant surprise awaiting
 you. Dentistry has changed so much in these last 10 years, you'll feel more like
 Rip Van Winkle than Israel G.

 High-speed, air turbine, water-cooled drills have produced a tremendous change in dentistry. They don't rattle your brains; they cool the tooth while they cut and cut rapidly with slightest pressure, and cavity preparations take much less time and effort.

 Disposable needles and syringes for "novocain" injections are now used once and thrown away, thus eliminating possible needle infection and reducing pain. No more "dum dum" needles.

 Gum treatment and root canal therapy have developed into specialties and are more scientific and more successful. As a result gums can be healthier and more teeth can be saved.

 X-ray machines are safer,
 more accurate, and take better pictures. Toothlike facing on bridges and crowns are more sanitary and last longer because of the development of a process of baking porcelain on gold.

 Yes, you're in for a treat.
 Rip. Your dentist may drill and fill your teeth to background sounds of Beethoven's 6th and you can relax on his new downy-soft-dental-ease chair. You might even be lulled to sleep—or even hypnotized!

 Simple cancer detection techniques called cytology have been developed and are widely used by dentists. And other oral diseases and their relationship to one's general health are better understood and treated.

 O.K. I admit that dentists still drill 'em and fill 'em.
 But soon this will change.
 Too. Go back to sleep for another 10 years, Rip, and when you awaken this time
 you may find that tooth decay has disappeared, teeth
 won't have to be extracted, gum troubles have been eliminated, and everyone will have perfect teeth.

 Well . . . maybe not perfect.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

 Please send your questions about dental health to Dr. Lawrence in care of this paper. While he cannot answer each letter personally, letters of general interest will be answered in this column.

Hold that tiger!
Princeton's Tigers won the Ivy League championship by edging Columbia 60-59 in New York Friday night and gained an automatic berth in the post-season NCAA Tournament that determines the National Collegiate basketball champion.

It was the Tigers' 10th straight victory and their 14th in their last 15 games since losing to top-ranked UCLA and second-ranked North Carolina in the New York Holiday Festival last December. The one defeat in that 15-game span was to fifth-ranked Davidson.

Unbeaten UCLA, after an unprecedented third straight national title, clinched at least a tie for the Pacific-8 crown by whipping Stanford on the road 81-60. Curtis Rowe had 25 points and All-American Lew Alcindor, playing only part of the game, scored 19 in leading the Bruins to their 39th in a row, 23 this season.

Davidson downed Richmond 97-83 and gained the finals of the Southern Conference championship tourney against East Carolina, which came from behind to defeat George Washington 84-79.

Fourth-ranked Santa Clara whipped Pepperdine 62-52. Temple conquered Gettysburg 86-70 and St. Joseph's, Pa. overcame Bucknell 83-67 to reach the finals of the Middle Atlantic Conference playoffs, and Texas A&M, the Southwest champ, warmed up for its NCAA competition by ripping Southern Methodist 119-98.

Colorado State U., an NCAA at-large entry, lost to Texas-El Paso 78-58 while Seattle, another NCAA at-large entry, whipped Seattle Pacific 57-47.

Jeff Petrie, a 6-foot-3 junior, paced Princeton with 27 points as the Tigers withstood a late Columbia rally. Tiger rooters now hope for a repeat of the 1965 NCAA tourney, the senior year of super-star Bill Bradley, when Princeton surprised by gaining third place in the finals at Portland, Ore.

Cornell beat Penn 64-62. Brown edged Harvard 68-67, Rhode Island upset Massachusetts 57-56, Dartmouth defeated Yale 74-62, Washington State got by Oregon State 62-60, Oregon took Washington 79-75 and Southern Cal tripped California 76-67 in other games.

Home Run King May Call It Quits

By MIKE BRYSON

Associated Press Sports Writer
Mickey Mantle is expected to disclose his future plans today and there is speculation the veteran New York Yankee slugger will announce he's calling it quits after 18 seasons to accept a non-playing post with the Yanks.

The 37-year-old better, famed for his tape-measure homers, is scheduled to report sometime today to New York's training camp at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and discuss his future with club officials.

There have been numerous reports since the close of last season that the soft-spoken superstar is considering retirement, but Mantle has refused to confirm or deny them.

However, Mantle and the Yankees reportedly worked out an informal agreement sometime ago that he would be given a post with the team when he decided to end his playing career.

While the Yankees are faced with a potential permanent holdout, the Houston Astros were still reeling today over one that became a surprising reality Friday.

Donn Clendenon, property of three different teams in six months who wound up with the Astros in a controversial deal, informed the team he isn't interested in playing for anyone.

Instead, he said, he's taking a position as vice president of an Atlanta

Atlanta firm for which he has worked in the off-season and will help Negro players obtain jobs after their careers end.

Meanwhile, the holdout list grew shorter, but Washington's big Frank Howard and St. Louis' Bob Gibson head a list of notables still unsigned.

Howard, the American League's top homer producer last year, flew back to Green Bay, Wis., after an unsuccessful contract talk with Bob Short, new owner of the Senators.

Howard reportedly is seeking a three-year contract at $100,000 a year, but Short is opposed to long-term pacts.

The Cardinals not only have not signed Gibson, but also Curt Flood, Lou Brock, Julian Javier, Mike Shannon and Dal Maxvill. Gibson reportedly wants $125,000—a $35,000 raise.

However, the Cards did sign Orlando Cepeda, who hit .248 and 16 homers last season, for $80,000.

Three teams—the Chicago Cubs, New York Mets and Chicago White Sox—reported they have signed everybody on their rosters. The Cubs inked Don Kessinger and Ron Swoboda and J.C. Martin agreed to terms with the Mets. Wilbur Wood, Tom McCraw, Woodie Held and Tommy John joined the White Sox fold.

underestimated. When A. B. (Happy) Chandler was elected commissioner in 1945, several city writers didn't like it. They favored either colleague Bill Corum or former colleague, Ford Frick.

So, Chandler claims, they helped get him fired.

"The New York writers were not friendly," he says. "They never gave me a chance. They never got accustomed to me — always treated me like a backwoods bumpkin. Some of them were fine fellows; others I can think of were not. The stuff they wrote was pure tripe."

But Chandler left. Kuhn has already drawn unfavorable remarks from several city columnists who favored Burke. Dick Young of The News, recognized as one of the country's outstanding baseball writers, called him a foreman, not a commissioner.

"A Michael Burke, he's not," began a story in the Post. "... just imagine if Burke—whatever you think of him—had been chosen to the post. Within 30 seconds, he'd be holding court, wheeling and dealing, handing out announcements for the revolution ..."

Another Post columnist, Milton Gross, pointed out that Kuhn said "baseball is more apple pie than apple pie," which may lead some of us to wonder how much more apple pie in the face we can take. A long tale of what Burke proposed to do had he been elected commissioner followed.

Newspaper criticism also pushed along the expulsion of former commissioner William Eckert. "He reduced the office to abject servitude," Young wrote. "Even the clubowners, having intentionally selected a man would make no waves, became contemptuous of his equivocations."

The entire situation has one bright side, though, Chandler says.

"I hear they're getting ready to move the baseball office to Chicago," he said, grinning. "Then what'll they do?"

the public address announcer:

"Ladies and gentlemen, tonight we're proud to have with us, seated behind the speaker's table, the new commissioner of baseball, Bowie Kuhn."

As yellow light reflects off Kuhn's smiling face and balding dome, a chorus of boos rises from the crowd and his smile vanishes.

"What's that for?" asks a puzzled writer. "Nobody hates baseball that much."

"It's not baseball," another columnist says. "It's Kuhn. They wanted Mike Burke."

Mike Burke, the mod, energetic president of the Yankees, was New York's first choice for commissioner. In fact, most club owners in Miami had intended that either Burke or San Francisco's Charles Feeney would replace William Eckert. But which one?

The rules of baseball require a three-quarter vote in each league—that is, 9 of 12 clubs must agree on one candidate. They stayed up until 5 a.m., voting: The National League for Feeney, the American League for Burke. No decision.

The next day, they selected Bowie Kuhn as a compromise commissioner. Here in New York, some people didn't like it—more important for Kuhn, some writers didn't like it.

MURRAY OLDERMAN

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—It took a couple of days to get Prof. Clyde Edward King to the phone from his sand diggings in the Arizona desert. Prof. King, who has been retained as the resident lecturer for the San Francisco Giants this year, was building a sliding pit at Casa Grande, where the team conducts its spring exercises.

Sliding practice for major leaguers?
"A guy," said the professor, resorting to the vernacular, "needs reminding even when he gets to the majors. Last year, three or four of the Giant regulars jammed and bruised their wrists in sliding."

Clyde (he's really not austere enough, despite the spectacles, to be "Professor") has the baseball equivalent of a doctorate to qualify him as the manager of a team which has now finished second four years in a row in the National League.

"My job," he said, "is to get them thinking in the right direction. A manager, they say, might not win more than five or six games a year for his team. But I played for fellows like Walter Alston, Charley Dressen and Leo Durocher, and they made a lot of difference in their teams."

The crucial element in King's credentials is that he has been identified with pitching—he has coached that art for the Cincinnati Reds, Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals—and it now dominates the sport.

"That's because pitching gets more personal, individual instruction," elaborated the professor, who will deliver a treatise on the subject at the drop of a vowel. Years ago, we once took a plane trip with him and managed to retain the notes of his lecture. They comprise a mini-King doctrine of pitching, samples of which follow:

"The main thing is to get them to think. The arm doesn't throw as many balls as the head.

"A pitcher learns more the three days he sits on the bench than on the day he pitches. I don't believe he should write down stuff in a book. He can't consult it on the mound.

"Don't give a pitcher a slider unless he doesn't have a curve. But a good slider is better than a mediocre curve. The low curve is the double play ball. The flat curve is the home run.

"You can be a one-pitch pitcher only if you throw a sinker or a knuckleball.

"Don't fool with success. Be careful of over-instructing. You've got to be a believer in yourself."

And for that he used the example of his first appearance as a major league pitcher, for the Brooklyn Dodgers in Ebbets Field. The bases were loaded, none out, when Clyde was called in to relieve with Phil Weintraub, Ernie Lombardi and Mel Ott of the New York Giants—a sluggers' row—coming up against the rookie pitcher.

"I mixed them up pretty good," recounted King. "and got the first two on infield pops. But Mickey Owens (the catcher) had come out to the mound and asked me to throw only fast balls. Ott doubled, and the next day Mr. (Branch) Rickey asked me why I threw only fast ones. I told him Mickey thought it would be best in that situation. He said, 'You have to determine yourself how you shall pitch.'"

Bringing us up to date, Clyde vowed, "I'm not going to fool with pitchers like Juan Marichal and Gaylord Perry unless they get in difficulty."

And despite his background, he is going to try to influence Giant hitters. "I worked," he said, "with two of the greatest batting instructors in history—George Sisler Sr., and Harry Walker Jr."

And what did he learn?
"That a left-handed batter has to have his right shoulder going to the pitcher at all times. It keeps you from backing out or going in one direction or the other."

King has also learned about being a manager and job security. When he was introduced to San Francisco, someone asked where he planned to live.

"Goldsboro," he said.
"Is that a suburb?"
"Yep."

"How far from town?"
"Oh, about 2,500 miles."

Goldsboro, N.C., is where he was born, raised and lived all his 44 years, and will continue to. There's no faculty tenure in baseball.
